Master Plan To Use German Repayment In Israeli Projects

Under a master development program devised by Solomon Trone, a United States expert, the Israeli Government is preparing to invest $615,000,000 of the reparations funds to be paid by West Germany, $181,000,000 obtained from other countries and $826,000,000 in local currency over a ten-year period.

Israel expects to receive $715,000,000, mainly in goods, from Germany. All major points have been settled and subcommittees are drafting the implementation texts in The Hague, the Netherlands.

When the Israeli delegation returns from The Hague an authority on German payments will be established, according to Mr. Trone's plan. The authority will open technical and economic offices in Israel and abroad to prepare all the technical work up to and including the writing of specifications for placing orders. Purchases will then be made directly by a Government purchasing mission, reports the New York Times.

Under Mr. Trone's plan, the largest investments will go into irrigation, building, electricity, railway and road transport. The plan calls for the following investments:

Railway—$67,000,000 from Germany, none from other countries; [illegible] in local currency. Road Transport—$34,000,000 from Germany, none from other countries, and $2,000,000. Port—$19,500,000 from Germany, $700,000 from other countries, and $6,000,000. Telecommunications—$22,000,000 from Germany, $12,000,000 from other countries, and $26,500,000. Electricity—$63,000,000 from Germany, $88,000,000 from other countries, and $97,000,000. Irrigation—$160,000,000 from Germany, $5,000,000 from other countries, and $152,000,000. [illegible] from Germany, none from other countries and none in local currency.

Purchases in countries other than Germany were provided only in the case of electrical goods, such as wiring, requiring large quantities of non-ferrous metals, which are not readily obtainable in Germany.

Mr. Trone also prepared an alternate investment plan involving about one half the expenditures in the original plan — $339,000,000 from German reparations; $94,000,000 from other countries; and £455,000,000 in Israel currency.

Long an employe of the General Electric Company, Mr. Trone has worked as an engineer on the Dnepropetrovsk dam in the Soviet Union, the Yalu River dam in Korea, in China, and in India. For the last eight months he has been employed by the Israeli Government and has submitted more than thirty reports on various phases of the country's economy.

Mr. Trone urged the creation of a central industrial planning body to replace all the independent planning organizations in the various ministries. He found that the present situation is typified by a lack of coordination, a multiplicity of planning, a shortage of skilled labor, a shortage of raw materials and of spare parts, and a lack of managerial and administrative skill, according to the New York Times.

He also proposed a national electricity authority "to deal with the whole problem of electrical energy from generation to application."

The investment in railways was expected to result in a shift of passenger traffic from buses to railways. At present 88 per cent of the passenger traffic is by bus and 6 per cent by train. Under Mr. Trone's plan by 1962 the rate would be 55 per cent bus and 45 per cent rail.

His plan for freight transportation includes a ropeway or cable track for carriers from Sodom to Kurnub to carry potash, a ropeway from the Mishash (great crater) to Kurnub to carry phosphates and the construction of a new railway from Kurnub via Beersheba to the sea, where a maritime ropeway and loading station would be built.

Mr. Trone advised against the acquisition of ships out of reparations except for two 16,000-ton [illegible]

The extension of the Haifa, Jaffa and Tel Aviv ports already begun will create enough capacity for all the needs until 1962, Mr. Trone said. His program for electricity called for the addition of 500,000 kilowatts to bring the total capacity to 800,000 kilowatts by 1962.

Mr. Trone said he hoped the present irrigated area could be quadrupled in the next ten years.

For new buildings he recommended the expenditures of sufficient money to put roofs over the heads

Asks All In U.S. To Aid Medical Center In N.Y.

The initial step in the planned construction of the first new medical school in New York in fifty-three years was taken when architectural and engineering contracts were signed for the $10,000,000 College of Medicine sponsored by Yeshiva University. The school, which will be non-sectarian, will be a part of a $25,000,000 medical center to be built in the northeast Bronx under Yeshiva's auspices.

Besides the College of Medicine, which is expected to open in the fall of 1964, the center eventually will include colleges of dentistry, nursing and public health and a post-graduate division. The project will be adjacent to and affiliated with the city's $36,500,000 Bronx Municipal Hospital Center, now under construction at Eastchester Road, Seminole Avenue and Pelham Parkway.

The new medical school will be designed by the architectural firm of Kelly & Gruzen, 60 Fifth Avenue, which recently designed the new Signal Corps training center at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and the "banjo-shaped" Mid-Brooklyn Comprehensive Senior High School for the New York City Board of Education.

The contracts were signed at the campaign headquarters of the College of Medicine, 270 Park Avenue, by Dr. Samuel Belkin, president of Yeshiva University, and [illegible] partner Gruzen, head of Kelly & Gruzen.

Among those present at the signing was Mayor Impellitteri, who called the event "one of the most forward-looking steps in the city in the last century."

"One of the most critical needs of our city — and the [illegible] — is the extraordinary shortage of qualified physicians. [illegible] turned away by medical colleges because of this shortage.

Mayor Impellitteri said that even in New York, "where we have the best medical schools in the country and probably in the world, there is a dearth of doctors in all boroughs. For that reason, he continued, the city has offered the school the full facilities of the Bronx Municipal Hospital Center, which will include an 849-bed general hospital with a psychiatric wing and a 500-bed tuberculosis hospital.

The Mayor pointed out that although the Yeshiva Medical Center was Jewish-sponsored, the center itself would be non-sectarian in the composition of students, faculty and staff.

"We are urging the people of our city and country," he added, "to support the building program of Yeshiva University so the medical center can open on schedule."

Others attending the ceremony were Samuel Levy, former Borough President of Manhattan and chairman of the university's board of trustees; Charles H. Silver, Manhattan member of the Board of Education, and Michael M. Nisselson, director of development for Yeshiva University. State Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein is chairman of the national fund-raising drive.

Calls For Doctors To Build Health Set-Up

Jewish doctors from eighteen countries attending the World Congress of Jewish Physicians in Jerusalem heard an appeal from the medical authorities for help in the task of organizing Israel's national health and medical services. Dr. Moshe Sherman of Tel Aviv, president of the Israel Medical Association, told the 270 delegates that the 3,000 physicians now living in Israel were inadequate for the execution of their task. He called for thousands of physicians to come from abroad as reinforcements.

The country is particularly short of young physicians able to work in immigrant encampments and the army. So acute is the shortage of young physicians that the Government is introducing an amendment to the Military Service Act permitting the Defense Minister to conscript doctors up to the age of 50 for the armed forces although the maximum age for compulsory military service is 38. Hebrew University graduated its first sixty-three physicians in May and it was estimated that it would take ten years for the gap to be closed.

Delegates to the Congress came from the United States, France, Britain, South Africa, Belgium, the Netherlands, Algiers, Tunis, Argentina, Chile, Australia, Switzerland, Italy, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Cyprus, and Portugal as well as Israel.

They were told by Dr. Haim Shaba, director general of the Ministry of Health, that unexpected immigration since the creation of the state in 1948 had brought 8,000 cases of active tuberculosis, 28,000 of inactive tuberculosis, 70,000 of trachoma, 10,000 bilharziasis, and at least 1,000 mental cases, reports the New York Times.

Dr. [illegible] said that some control of malaria and tuberculosis had been achieved but that there was a spread of infantile paralysis, enteric fever, and also paratyphoid, and diphtheria. The situation resulted partly from the fact that the medical profession "put aside social preoccupation and pity to study social problems," he declared.

Dr. [illegible] noted that the population is sensitive [illegible]

Daughter Of Freud Reports On Study Of War Orphans

Clinical studies of the impact of World War II on children who became separated from either or both of their parents have disclosed proof of physical ills rooted in emotional disturbance, according to an expert study. The report was made by Miss Anna Freud of the Child Study Center in London to a United Nations seminar that recently closed a three-week session at Bishop Otter College in Chichester, England.

Miss Freud, daughter of Sigmund Freud, discussed with specialists in psychology, pediatrics, public health and allied fields from thirty countries the results of a prolonged investigation she had made of the effects of the war on "unaccompanied" children. The World Health Organization made public a summary of the meetings.

The entire period of hostilities provided an enormous involuntary experiment in child psychology, Miss Freud said, especially in cases of early separation from families. Infants bereft of their mothers, she said, would develop colds, sore throats, intestinal disturbances and other manifestations to an unusual degree. All of these ailments had a psychological origin, she declared, and children regressed in physical development, so that some already able to walk and talk would cease to do so.

Her observation of a group of [illegible] from the Oswiecim [illegible] concentration camp [illegible] and lost their parents in early [illegible] indicated, Miss Freud said, that the affection normally be[illegible] on parents was transferred [illegible] children of the same [illegible] Jealousy among children, [illegible] included, develops by way of [illegible] and is essentially compe[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] investigation [illegible] parents, but never wholly replaced the natural relationship. An enormous time lag was possible in the ultimate effects of the separation, so that on occasion these upheavals might occur five or ten years later. They are frequently "enormously revealing," she added.

The child psychologist, stressing the cruelty, short-sightedness and hardship of separating brothers and sisters of different ages when they are placed in orphanages, urged administrators to think seriously before acting in such cases.

Dr. Jenny Roudinesco, psychiatrist in Paris hospitals, confirmed Miss Freud's findings with a description of the apathy and lack of spirit she had noted among two-year olds in a French orphanage. To dramatize her findings, Dr. Roudinesco said, she made a film, entitled "The Case of Monique," that graphically demonstrates the serious damage inflicted on children by a lack of family affection.

A general study of child histories from the United States, Britain and France brought the consensus that instead of the mechanistic approach to child-rearing, including the preference for bottle-feeding popular in certain countries only a generation ago, the aim should be—in the words of Dr. Margaret Mead of the United States—"to work with nature, not to try to bend it." The child-mother relationship, the specialists felt, should be interfered with as little as possible.

German Court Finds Jew Guilty Of Misuse Of Nazi Victims' Funds

Dr. Philipp Auerbach, suspended head of the Bavarian State Office for Restitution to Jewish victims of Nazism, was convicted of embezzlement and bribe-taking at Munich, Germany, and sentenced to thirty months in prison. He also was fined 2,700 marks ($642.80). The United Press said the embezzlement charge involved $714,000 which should have gone to Hitler's victims.

Auerbach was himself a victim of Nazi persecution, and after the war he told an American military tribunal how his training as a chemist had saved his life. During the Nazi purge of Jews, he related, he was sent to Auschwitz concentration camp, and Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief, assigned him to the job of making a soap for Hitler's personal use. Himmler gave elaborate instructions: The soap was to be dark green, have rose perfume and be fancy in shape.

Himmler told the chemist: "If the soap is too strong, you will be hanged; if too weak, you will be shot." Auerbach made it just right.

Auerbach was in New York in 1949 to confer with officials of the Joint Distribution Committee on expediting the claims of victims of Naziism who had come to the United States, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

To the last, he denied making any profit out of his office which handled millions of dollars in payments to Jews robbed and persecuted by the Nazis. The court, however, convicted him of embezzling state funds appropriated for repayment of Jewish victims, accepting several bribes, attempting extortion, attempting to give false sworn statements, and unauthorized use of the title of "doctor of philosophy."

It acquitted him of [illegible] non-existent Jewish [illegible]

Dr. Berthold Kronisch, former head of the restitution office's legal department, was convicted of issuing false documents and sentenced to four months in jail and 500 marks ($119) fine. Dr. Klaus Hoenig-Ohnsorg, another restitution office employee, was convicted of extortion and sentenced to one year in prison and 200 marks ($47.60) fine.

Herr Auerbach and Rabbi Ohrenstein insisted throughout the trial that they were innocent, and their attorney charged that the judges were prejudiced by their former Nazi background. His attempts to have the case transferred to another court were rejected.

Among the crimes Herr Auerbach was charged with was accepting 5 and 10 per cent "kickbacks" from construction companies employed to build a cemetery for Jewish victims of the notorious Dachau concentration camp, near Munich, says the New York Times.

Rabbi Ohrenstein was convicted of signing documents that stated that mythical "victims" were eligible for restitution payments.

Herr Auerbach had spent fourteen months in jail awaiting trial. This time was to be deducted from his thirty months' sentence. The state prosecutors had asked the court to sentence Herr Auerbach to five years in prison and Rabbi Ohrenstein to two years.

The former leader of Bavaria's Jewish community was tried by a five-member court, including three former Nazis. The verdict capped a stormy five-month trial which had aroused bitter dispute in Germany and keen interest in Jewish communities throughout the world. It

Milestone Award Goes To Mayer

Louis B. Mayer, who resigned last August as studio head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been chosen by the Screen Producers Guild to be the second recipient of its Milestone Award for historic contributions to the development of American motion pictures. The presentation will be made at the organization's second annual milestone dinner on October 22 at the New Statler Hotel in Los Angeles. Jesse L. Lasky, another pioneer producer, received the honor last year.

Sol C. Siegel, president of the guild, announced that Mr. Mayer, who began his film career in 1907, was chosen because he, more than any other industry leader, was "responsible for the establishment of the creative producer system as it exists today." Mr. Mayer was credited by Mr. Siegel with having helped shape the careers of the late Irving Thalberg, Dore Schary, present head of M-G-M; Arthur Freed, winner last year of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Thalberg Memorial Award; Sidney Franklin, Pandro S. Berman and Lawrence Weingarten, among other top producers.

After a quarter of a century of service, Mr. Mayer announced that he would still make pictures. He acquired several story properties, but so far none has progressed to the stage of actual filming.

GERMAN COURT

the proceedings, in his final statement he thanked them for "a fair trial".

Political observers, while agreeing that the German press had made a strong and generally successful effort to report the case objectively, fear that the publicity given the matter has appealed to the feelings of many Germans who still privately believe that Hitler's anti-Semitic program "was not so wrong after all." One weekly illustrated magazine predicted, according to the New York Times, that "The Auerbach trial will set off a new wave of anti-Semitism in Germany."

Philipp Auerbach, former head of the restitutions office in Bavaria, who was convicted of irregularities in office, died in Munich two days later from an overdose of sleeping pills, according to his wife.

Frau Auerbach and a friend of the 46-year-old former inmate of a concentration camp called the death and apparent suicide. The German police refuse to comment. Herr Auerbach, who was in private hospital clinic under police custody, was said by his wife to have been found near death in the morning — too late to be saved. Frau Auerbach disclosed she had received a letter from her husband in which he declared he could not bear the shame of his conviction.

Herr Auerbach had announced his intention of demanding a retrial. The German press was filled with commentary on the trial. Some newspapers stressed the "fairness" of the trial, the first big post-war trial involving Jews in Germany, while others, notably the United States-sponsored Neue Zeitung, emphasized that Herr Auerbach had been found guilty of crimes that hardly approached the magnitude of the earlier charges leveled against him, according to the New York Times.

The case was a political football from the start, more than a year ago, when Herr Auerbach was suspended from office and the State Ministry of Justice issued piecemeal allegations of embezzlement of funds intended for Jewish victims of Nazism, bribery and kickbacks.

In the course of the trial State Justice Minister Josef Mueller, a bitter political foe of the defendant, resigned when charges of money irregularities were made against him. Herr Auerbach was found innocent of the charge against him that he had drawn money from the State Government Treasury to assist [illegible] months for a large number of non-existent Jewish immigrants to Israel.

Many Allied officials thought the case had assumed an exaggerated importance, chiefly because of the way it was presented to the public by the state Government officials.

Herr Auerbach was sick for many months. Suffering from diabetes and kidney trouble, he stayed in a hospital under police custody most of last year while State Justice officials "prepared" his case by releasing partial charges to the press and the State Parliament conducted a public inquiry which the defendant was not permitted to attend, says the New York Times.

Born in Hamburg and a chemist by profession, Herr Auerbach was arrested by the Nazis in 1932 for Socialist activities. He escaped prison and emigrated to Belgium where the Gestapo picked him up in 1942 and sentenced him to death on a charge of attempted treason.

Herr Auerbach spent two years in political prison in Berlin. This was followed by imprisonment in the concentration camps of Oswiecim (Auschwitz) and Buchenwald to the end of the war.

Diabetes is a dangerous disease that annually kills many Canadians and incapacitates many more who may not realize that they have the disease. Regular medical examinations help to diagnose the disease so that it may be controlled. Keeping the weight down, especially if over forty, eating a balanced diet help to prevent the disease.

English In Jerusalem

BY JACOB SARNA

Israel in general is not a land of snobs. It is said to be a democratic country where all who can, and those who cannot, speak Hebrew with an accent and an intonation common to all, though practically every Israeli is a polyglot, able to speak at least half a dozen languages.

But when one knows, or thinks he knows, English, there is at once discernible in him (or her) a certain superior attitude that borders on snobbery. For reasons impossible to fathom, the Israeli who knows English is proud of the fact, and spares no effort to impress this superiority upon you. His English, he is fully convinced, is the most perfect on earth. If in addition he had a nephew or a niece who was employed by the Mandatory, he is quite convinced that he could be professor of English at the Hebrew University.

Moreover, if you come from an English-speaking country and speak English despite your ability to converse in Hebrew, you are guaranteed a minimum standard of courtesy which you do not get if you speak the best of Hebrew. This, of course, is not always the case, for I have been told by a Tel-Aviv bus driver whom I asked why he started so late, that "he knew more English in his little finger than I knew in my head."

At every turn one can see shop signs and posters purporting to give an English translation of the Hebrew legend above, and directed to attract the custom of visitors from countries where dollars and pound notes are found in abundance. My first acquaintance at a Conditory. Now, what is a conditory? It is a place where one can sit down, drink a cup of bad tea or indifferent coffee, and eat good cake, for a sum which would buy one a dinner in London. Such a place in Vienna or Berlin was called Konditorei, consequently the English translation of the word is "conditory."

Having drunk my coffee and paid the waitress, I go out into the open and soon feel hungry. My attention is quickly drawn to a shop over which hangs a large sign bearing the legend Nakniakya in Hebrew, which is properly translated as "Sausagery" in English. Having satisfied my hunger in the Sausagery, I proceed to the grocer and ask for a packet of pepper. I am, however, soon corrected by the obliging grocer who tells me that what I really mean is a packet of "paiper."

A grocery in Hebrew is called Makoleth; quite a smart-sounding name. But in Israel-English it is called grocery cum shop, though nobody can possibly fail to see that the establishment is anything but a shop. Before I leave the Makoleth the grocer asks me whether I would like to buy "a tin of Salomon?" That sounds rather attractive, and I am anxious to know what the tin contains that is named after King Solomon? It transpires that what is meant is a plain tin of salmon, and I can on no account convince the grocer that the correct word is salmon and not Salomon. He points to the L, and that is the end of the argument.

For some strange reason my greengrocer appears to have neither a Hebrew nor an English shop-sign, but I stand corrected when, asking for a kilo tomatoes, I am told that "tomaitoes" are not being distributed this week.

From the greengrocer I proceed to a furniture shop to buy a couple of chairs, and I am thrilled to read a red sign in the window that the furniture made by this firm is "made of qualified wood." Satisfied that I shall have chairs made of "qualified wood," I notice across the road an establishment that goes by the name of "Textile and Gallantery," and I come to the conclusion that if I bought textiles in this shop, I would be treated in a gallant manner. I am, however,

MARRIAGES

GROSSBAUM-STERNLIEB

The marriage of Zita, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sternlieb, of Quebec City, to Nathan Grossbaum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Grossbaum, Mount Royal Avenue West, took place on Sunday, August 3, at half-past six o'clock, in the Mount Royal Hotel, Dr. C. N. Danburg, Rabbi, officiating. The bride was given away by her brother, Norman M. Sternlieb, of Quebec City. She was gowned in white Chantilly lace, the skirt falling into a train. Her fingertip-length veil of tulle illusion was attached to a matching cap, trimmed with seed-pearl beads, and she carried a prayer book with a white orchid and stephanotis. Mrs. A. Weiss, sister of the bridegroom, as matron of honor, wore a light blue net gown, trimmed with lace, and a matching hat, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Misses Charlotte Sternlieb and Candi Schwartzman, nieces of the bride, of Quebec City; Shirley Weiss, of Montreal, and Mollie Grossbaum, of Quebec City, nieces of the bridegroom, were junior bridesmaids. They wore ballerina-length frocks of white embroidered organza, with matching bandeaux, and carried white posegays. Julius Schwartzman, of Quebec City, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. The ushers were: Mitchell Rabinovitch, of Montreal; Sol. Serchuk, Moe Darabaner, and Jack Grossbaum, all of Quebec City. The junior ushers were: Ronald Weiss, of Montreal; Louis Grossbaum, Jack Sternlieb, and Michael Harvey Schwartzman. White gladioli were used to decorate, and also for the reception in the hotel. Mrs. Grossbaum, mother of the bridegroom, wore grey-blue lace and nylon, with a matching hat, and corsage of white stephanotis. Mrs. Norman Sternlieb, sister-in-law of the bride, was gowned in eggshell-coloured nylon, and had a beaded head-dress and an orchid corsage. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Grossbaum left for the United States, the bride travelling in a grey and white shantung suit, with a red feathered hat and black accessories. They will reside at Souart Avenue. The bride attended Dalhousie University, at Halifax, N. S., and is a graduate of Herbert Reddy Memorial Hospital School of Nurses. The bridegroom was overseas with the R.C.A.F., for five years during the Second World War.

The marriage of Muriel, youngest daughter of Reverend and Mrs. Joseph Pater, 5180 Park Avenue, and formerly of London, England, to Max Silverstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Silverstein, 6440 MacDonald Avenue, took place on May 25, at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, at half-past twelve o'clock. Dr. Solomon Frank and Reverend I. Krul officiated. The bride was given away by her mother, Mrs. Joseph Pater, and her brother-in-law, Harry Friedberg. She wore a floor-length gown of white embossed organdy, cut with a round neckline, long sleeves, with pointed cuffs, a tight-fitted bodice, and a three-tiered full skirt. Her fingertip veil of nylon tulle illusion was arranged with a small organdy cap, and she carried white and pink carnations and white satin streamers. Mrs. Harry Friedberg was matron of honor for her sister. She wore an aquamarine-blue cocktail dress of lace over taffeta, and a picture hat of the same shade, and carried a small bouquet of spring flowers. Saul Silverstein, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The synagogue, the altar, and the canopy were decorated with palms, spring flowers, and white satin streamers. Mrs. M. Pinsler played the organ. Mrs. M. Waldman, sister of the bride, of Moss Bank, Sask., sang "Because". Leon Kofman played violin music after the reception which took place in the synagogue hall. Flowers were used to decorate. Mrs. Pater wore a cocktail dress of sky-blue lace, with matching hat, American Beauty-red accessories, and a corsage of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Silverstein, in champagne-coloured lace, had a pink hat, matching gloves, and a corsage of pink roses. The bride and groom spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida; New Orleans, La.; Chicago, Ill.; Detroit, Mich.; and Toronto, Ont. The bride travelled in a grey worsted suit, with red and white accessories, a picture hat of red straw, trimmed with white and red chiffon, and a corsage of red roses. They are residing on Park Avenue. Mrs. M. Waldman and son, Hartley, sister and nephew of the bride, of Moss Bank, Sask.; Maurice Waldman, of Toronto, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. David Weiner, of Detroit, Mich., were wedding guests.

LEVITAN-ROSENHEK

The marriage of Constance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rosenhek, Wilson Avenue, to Harold Lee Levitan, son of Dr. and Mrs. Julius J. Levitan, of Newton Centre, Mass., took place at four o'clock, on June 29, in the Vice-Regal Suite of the Ritz Carlton Hotel, Rabbi Maurice Cohen officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ankle-length gown of blush-pink Chantilly lace and tulle, having a long torso, and a full [illegible], with [illegible] of pleats. She had a bandeau covered with a short tulle veil, and carried pink and white rosebuds and carnations. Miss Ruth Levitan, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, was in a pink accordion-pleated organza frock, having short bell sleeves; also matching shoes, and a bandeau of maroon silk roses, with a short veil of tulle illusion, and carried a nosegay of maroon carnations. Miss Hinda Rosenhek, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was dressed like the maid of honor, her bandeau being of deep wine-coloured silk roses, and she carried a nosegay of carnations of the same shade. Marvin Rosenhek, brother of the bride, was best man. Pale pink peonies formed the decorations. A reception took place in the Vice-Regal suite. Mrs. Rosenhek wore a cocktail dress of shades from pink to rose, a flowered hat of deep wine colour, and a corsage of roses ranging from pale pink to deep rose. Mrs. Levitan wore a cream-coloured linen cocktail-dress, trimmed with matching lace, a matching hat, and a corsage of pink roses. The bridal couple left by plane on a wedding trip to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, the bride wearing a black silk suit, with patent leather accessories, and a white cloche straw hat. They will reside on Lorne Crescent. The bride is a graduate in Arts of McGill University, and attends the McGill School of Social Work. The bridegroom graduated from Yale University, and is at present in the Faculty of Medicine at McGill University.

Success Story Clothier To Open 28th Store

Stories about success in the United States are plentiful. But every once in a while there appears one of those really exceptional factual life stories that put fiction to shame. Such is the story of Samuel O. Newman.

Back in the Nineteen Twenties, Sam Newman was "pulling them in" off the streets in the lower East Side in order to make a sale of men's clothing. He was known as the "quarter-meter" boy, for he squeezed profits small in order to make a sale and also to put a quarter in the gas meter.

That man who came over to the United States in steerage with his mother, after being in a Russian concentration camp during World War I, is today president of Ripley Clothes, one of the nation's largest manufacturers and retail outlets for men's garments. Next month he opens up his twenty-eighth store. The string that began in New York City now will stretch to New England and out to Missouri, says the New York Times.

Sam Newman's story is a fantastic one and one that could only find birth in America.

Sam's father was a rabbi. When his mother and he found the way to come to the United States they were forced to leave the head of the family behind. He followed later. "S. O.," on his introduction to America, decided he'd have to prove his mettle, but the post-war years were slim. While going to school he worked week-ends for various clothing concerns. He apparently had the touch of the salesman, for he astounded his employers with his ability to move merchandise.

In 1926 he felt he had accumulated enough money to embark on his own and a Stanton Street store caught his eye. Every day during his lunch hour or later he'd stand in front of the store saying to himself: "That's for mine." An old lady who lived in the neighborhood often would come along and express wonder at his interest. Finally one day she said: "Are you interested in buying this store? If so, don't do it — you'll lose your shirt." That convinced Sam that he should buy the store. That was the beginning of the Ripley Clothes organization as it is constituted today. That store is still part of the system. The big factory on the West Side and all of his new and modern stores throughout half the country cannot take away his affection for Stanton Street.

Sam took gambles in the clothing industry during the depression, when other organizations were folding right and left. He'd since entered the manufacturing end and with his customers falling all around him decided to take over their businesses as they hit the ground. It was a gamble, but one that paid off. The going from then on is a saga of the men's clothing industry. There have been many who have made their mark in this business but no other took the chances and made the most of them the way Sam Newman did, says the New York Times.

Invite Soviet Blind To Enter Contest

The Voice of America broadcast an invitation to the blind of the Soviet Union and its satellites to join the sightless of the free world as entrees in the first worldwide international literary competition for the blind sponsored by the Jewish Braille Review of America. Leopold Dubov, editor of the magazine, said the blind "recognize no curtains," and this invitation is proof that any propaganda which stated that the people of America do not wish to live in peace and friendship with the people of the Soviet Union, is untrue.

This is the Eighth International Literary Competition of the Jewish Braille Review, which is now marking its twenty-first anniversary as a literary and cultural publication for the Jewish and non-Jewish English-speaking blind throughout the world, Mr. Dubov said. "Each competition has been open to the blind without restrictions of race, creed, color or national origin." Pointing out that this year was the centenary of the death of Louis Braille, Mr. Dubov said that "In honor of the man who bequeathed to the sightless the fingertip key to the communicative arts of reading and writing, this competition will be worldwide and entries will be acceptable in every language, either broadcast by the Voice of America or spoken by a member of the United Nations. To the blind, whose kinship transcends national boundaries, this is truly, 'One World,'" he said.

"Enjoying the blessings of freedom and the opportunity to lead a full life, despite blindness, that is our privilege as Americans, and abhoring the creeping aggression and police state bondage of the Kremlin oligarchs who now menace our world," Mr. Dubov declared, "we no less extend the hand of friendship to our sightless brethren of the Soviet Union to welcome them into the universal brotherhood of Brailleland which recognizes no curtains — iron or otherwise. Let this serve as a concrete expression of the goodwill of the American people for the people of the Soviet Union with whom they wish to live in peace and friendship — a proof that any propaganda which says otherwise, is untrue."

As in the past, the competition will be open to non-professional blind writers and will be divided into prose and poetry sections. In conducting the competitions, Mr. Dubov said, the sponsors have followed the advice of Pearl Buck, one of its judges who suggested to blind writers that:

"They will make use of their own gifts, that they will not imitate those who see with the physical eye, but will cultivate their special vision, and through their own experience of life, from their own viewpoint, open to the rest of the world, to the seeing who are often the unseeing, the true meaning of what lies within the mind and spirit of human beings."

Entries should not be less than 1,000, nor more than 2,000 words in prose, and should not exceed 32 lines in poetry. Four cash prizes will be awarded in each division, Mr. Dubov announced. The Helen Keller Gold Medal for Literary Excellence will be awarded to the first prize winner in any of the major languages submitted. The judges will be noted literary personalities, and will be appointed by the Director General of UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization), James Torres Bodet. Their names will be announced later. William Somerset Maugham, Pearl Buck, Joseph Auslander, Robert Nathan and William Rose Benet have served as judges in the past. The closing date for entries to be received at the Jewish Braille Review, 1846 Harrison Avenue, New York 53, N. Y., U. S. A., is September 10.

ENGLISH IN JERUSALEM

soon undeceived, for I am told that "gallantery" in Jerusalem means a place where one can buy shirts and collars and ties and handkerchiefs; just as "Tailor modern for leidis" is the correct description of a tailor of ladies.

After all these purchases, my wife decides to buy a new corset, and is directed to a famous (they are all famous here!) corset maker in Rehavia. We walk all along the road and our attention is at last drawn to a door-plate on which is written in the most refined English: "Corsets, entrance from behind." For some moments we are puzzled about the correct meaning of the legend. Does it mean that the corsets made here are entered from behind, or that the corset-maker's establishment is entered from behind, and from behind where? We ultimately find the right solution and soon enter the famous establishment situated round the corner of the street.

Not very far away from the corset-maker is a blue-white shop-sign with the picture of a man with a fez and a pair of hands held up like ishaudil, a Cohen during the priestly benediction. The shop sign tells me distinctly that here lives a "Fortune teller" who tells people's future by merely looking at their hands. I decide to pay him a visit at some future date, and proceed to a shop where I buy some toys for my grandson. This proves easy enough, for a large board tells me that "Playthings are sold here."

I purchase a game-set which in plain English should mean "Catch the Thief." In Jerusalem, however, the game is described in large letters as a "Game of Persecution." Full instructions in Hebrew and English are given, and one of the rules is that: "The above generalities are not obligated by the Thief." This is so simple I feel convinced my grandson will understand it without undue difficulty.

Not very far away is another mysterious establishment which described in golden letters as "Occasion Finkelstein," and only a few houses further is another such place described as "Occasion Jolowitsch," and round the corner is another one which functions under the name of "Occasions Express." They all sell souvenirs and antiques, and it seems that a souvenir in English is called "Occasion," that it is sometimes used in the plural and sometimes spelt with two "S"s as occasion may demand.

I now consider I have had a good course of English in Jerusalem and feel somewhat run-down. I decide to call on a doctor. There are many of them in the Holy City, and they all describe the kind of illnesses they are able to cure. One does "women and other diseases," and another, next door, cures "old ages, stomach and nerve diseases." I decide on the latter, tell him I suffer from frequent headaches, and he asks me "How often does it swindle me before my eyes?" I take his prescription to the chemist next door, and my attention is drawn to the existence of a "Diplomated Bandagiste." I promise myself to go in one day and find out what it is all about.

CLASS IN COOKERY

NEW-IDEA JAM DUMPLINGS

Boil five or six medium-sized potatoes until soft. Grate boiled potatoes into a bowl, add flour to thicken. Then add one beaten egg and salt to taste. Knead until well-mixed, and then stretch out dough on a floured board. Cut into squares and drop spoonsful of thick prune jam in the centre of each square. Seal up squares, and then boil them in slightly-salted water for five or six minutes. Drain off water. Roll in bread-crumbs which have been fried in a little fat; and put dumplings in a moderate oven to brown.

PRIZE YEAST CAKE

four level cups flour
one-half pound butter
three egg yolks
one package dry yeast
two tablespoons sour cream three-quarters cup milk
four tablespoons sugar
one-half teaspoon salt

Thoroughly dissolve one teaspoon of the sugar into one-half cup of the milk. The milk should be luke-warm. Then add the dry yeast. Let stand for ten minutes. Then stir well. While yeast is standing, sift flour and salt together. Add soft butter, sugar, egg yolks, and mix. After stirring yeast-mixture, add it to flour-mixture. Then add sour cream, and remaining milk, and combine. Knead well, and place in refrigerator over-night, or let it stand in greased, covered bowl until risen to double in size.

Filling

three egg whites
three-quarters cup white sugar
one cup chopped walnuts
one teaspoon cocoa one teaspoon rum

Beat egg whites until stiff; add chopped nuts, sugar, cocoa, and rum, if desired. Mix well. Roll out dough on floured board, until three-quarters of an inch in thickness; spread filling on top, and roll up again. Grease top, and place in round, lightly-greased cake-tin, and allow to stand for two more hours, or until puffy, and double in size. Place in 350-degree oven, and bake for one hour.

HALTS PAPER ON W.J.C. COMPLAINT

Pan American World Airways halted the distribution to its passengers in Germany of "Revue", a Munich illustrated magazine, following protests from the World Jewish Congress that the periodical "contained very thinly disguised neo-Nazi propaganda". Informed by L. Perlzweig, international affairs director of the organization, said that Pan American Airways had agreed to halt distribution, following representations pointing out that "persons who lost close relatives at the hands of the Germans found statements glorifying the German army and dealing sympathetically with the war criminals now serving sentences" to be very offensive.

He cited complaints about the periodical, received by the European offices of the WJCongress, and made reference to an editorial which appeared in the Manchester Guardian decrying the presence on Pan American aircraft of a magazine containing articles on such Nazi leaders as Goebbels and the imprisoned German war criminals, reminiscences of Hitler by his physician, and praise of the German soldier in the last war. In announcing that the "Revue" would no longer be carried on aircraft operated by Pan American Airways in Germany, Paul T. Rennell, Atlantic Division sales manager of the airline, expressed appreciation to the World Jewish Congress for calling this matter to the company's attention.

First Lieutenant (Chaplain) Henry Seigman, an Orthodox Jewish chaplain, has been assigned to the 8th Army in Korea, his first overseas duty. The youngest chaplain serving in the Armed Forces of the United States, he will be 24 years old in December. He is a brilliant talmudic scholar and was ordained at the Yeshiva Mesifta Torah Vodaath in Brooklyn, N. Y., just before his 21st birthday. He volunteered for the military service in the Chaplaincy Procurement Program of the National Jewish Welfare Board, which recruits and endorses Jewish chaplains for the military service. Chaplain Seigman was awarded a Scroll of Special Commendation by the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America.

George Jessel, film producer, comedian and star of stage and screen, has gone on a survey mission of Europe and Israel for the United Jewish Appeal to prepare himself for an extensive speaking tour in behalf of the fall campaign. He will spend a week with Israeli officials and officers, and is accompanied by his daughter, Jerilyn. In Israel, Mr. Jessel will play the lead in a motion picture short to be used in helping to raise money.

IN MEMORIAM

KAHLENBERG: In loving memory of a dearly beloved husband and father who passed away two years ago, August 14, 1950, (first day of Elul).

I lost my life's companion,
A life linked with my own.
Day by day I miss you more and more,
As I walk through life alone,
I am sad within my memory,
Lonely in my heart.

Ever remembered by your dear loving wife, Susie; daughter, Yetta; son-in-law, Sam Weiner; son, Bennie; daughter-in-law, Margie; and grandchildren, Sally Weiner, Arthur, Murray, and Davida Kahlenberg.

GORODETSKY: In loving memory of our dearly beloved [illegible] Gorodetsky, who died in action on August 20, 1944. Always remembered by his sister, Fannie, and brother, Solomon.

A young child who is a little careless with the truth and with other people's property rights is not necessarily starting on a criminal career. He may lie because he does not understand adults' valuations and he may think he has need of the moment of the articles to which he helps himself. More respect for this property on the part of the rest of the family and a good example in truthfulness will help the child to adjust himself to what is expected of him as he grows older.

Asks U.S. To Bar Nazi Doctor

Dr. Walter B. Schreiber, former high-ranking Nazi doctor who was responsible for sadistic experiments in German concentration camps, is seeking re-admission to the United States, according to reports which have reached the American Jewish Congress, it was announced by Dr. Israel Goldstein, president. In a letter to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, he urged that Schreiber be denied admission, and asked that the State Department undertake a complete investigation of how he entered the country initially, "with a view toward ending the dispensing of special privilege to him and men of his ilk."

The Nazi doctor, brought to the U.S. by the Air Force and employed at the School of Aviation Medicine, at Randolph Field, Texas, left the U.S. for Argentina last May, after protests of civic groups, prominent physicians and congressmen had forced the cancellation of his Air Force contract. Pointing out that Schreiber had "actively participated in the sadistic and inhuman medical experiments performed on concentration camp inmates by Nazi doctors during World War II," and that he was "the principal assistant of Gen. Handloser, who was sentenced to life imprisonment by a War Crimes Court for directing these experiments," Dr. Goldstein declared that "the thought that Schreiber might be permitted to find a haven in the United States is abhorrent to the American Jewish Congress, and will be equally horrifying to all persons familiar with his long record of atrocities and crimes against humanity."

Is There A Recipe For An Ideal Marriage?

BY DAVID WEISS, OF MONTREAL, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, BARON DE HIRSCH INSTITUTE AND THE JEWISH CHILD WELFARE BUREAU

According to popular notion, one might say that the two most essential ingredients that go into making up of an ideal marriage are: a great deal of dollars, and a great deal of sense. Since most of us were not born rich, nor can expect to marry some one rich, the demands of maturity require adjustments to realities. The scope of these realities should be touched upon. There is of course the obvious business aspect or economy of married life. This has to do with housing, budget management, the division of labor between the married couple and the children in regard to the chores and responsibilities of the family, and a whole host of similar situations that need to be dealt with.

How is money handled in your home? In the business of family life, is there a fair and equitable partnership for all its members? Do you live within your means, or are your means to live beyond your capacity and ability? What of the question of saving for the present, the future, such as education, improvement in your standard of living, insurance for protection of yourself and your family, and even the unspeakable need to plan for one's death?

How are the tensions and crises engendered by money dealt with? Do your children participate in family plans and concerns? Is money being used as a medium of affection or as a means of exchange?

In other areas of family life, there are of course questions such as health, proper living arrangements, the need for vacations, recreation, and communal relationships on an informal and formal basis.

There is also the whole situation concerning romantic, physical love versus sexual or mature love between the married partners.

What is the meaning of love and affection in your family life? Is it "All Passion Spent"? Do you live in a constant state of ecstasy, or failing it, feel frustrated or unloved? What of the other feelings that are inevitable in any human relationship, particularly in the intimate confines of marriage and family living? How does one go about learning the facts of love, and secure in the experience of loving the kind of gratification that enables one to give love as well as to get love?

Marriage and the family embody the highest fulfilment of human destiny. There is no complete and absolute preparation for this experience that can be learned in books or schools or by lectures. One can only learn and grow in such a situation, through such relationships. What is your growth index in respect to this? Are you merely growing older, fatter, balder, or growing wiser and more relaxed? Is your family the microcosm of the wider world which surrounds and is built upon the millions of units of such families as yours?

Do you live for each day unto itself, or are you always deferring some experience because you either have not enough money for this thing, or you are too tired or busy to be too involved in your family relationship? How much fantasy or reality, how much idealism or cynicism exists in your relationship at home? Is home a place you look forward to being in, even though much of your time is inevitably taken with out-of-home activity such as work, school, business, or committee and group activity? What traditions cement and bind your family? What are the rituals involved in your family's experience with regard to eating, sleeping, playing, learning, loving, crying, suffering, in friendships, in memberships, in religious and formal educational associations?

Do you believe that your family is democratically organized and led? Or do you believe that the father or the mother should manage the home without any interference from other members? Are you able to discuss matters of little and great importance? Must you always be right, or can you be wrong and still find life worth while at home?

How much guilt do you have in relation to your family members? Are you always getting yourself "in dutch" with other members of the family, despite your good intentions? What about relatives and friends? Are they interfering, or encouraging? Do you like them to visit with you and you to visit with them? What about the difference in relationship with different generations in your own family, provided you have grandparents as well as grandchildren? What hobbies, what opportunities for fun and activity are made in your family?

Does your family belong to groups in the community because you really find them worth while or merely a matter of social prestige?

Do your home and marriage provide opportunities for you and your children to develop a growing sense of trust, autonomy, initiative, accomplishment, interdependence, intimacy, recognition and acceptance of parental and filial roles, and deep and abiding sense of integrity? How much "nonsense" goes on in your home and what toleration do you have for this? Are you a perfectionist in your relationships at home, at work, at play? Can you accept failures, errors, mistakes, and learn from them, or is life worthless unless you always come out right?

Do you really live by recipes, formulas, exhortations, or live life for its real sake? When we enter the era of adolescence, we look forward, with trepidation and eagerness, to the tasks of achieving a vocation and a mate. After marriage, four tasks become the framework for most of our efforts. These are: to raise children, to provide and protect them adequately during infancy and childhood, to enable them to achieve emotionally durable and healthy personalities, and to allow the members of the family group to fulfill themselves as worthwhile and useful individuals.

Are there any other more useful than these, or in the realization of which can bring us closer to the ideal?
